

The stage as a metaphor for developing students' academic reading practices

- Students struggle with the purpose of academic reading: "I've written my essay...I just need to find references to support it now."
- The term 'range' adds an extra puzzle to the struggle: "How many sources do we have to put in for references? Ten? Twenty?"
 - Y2 sees increasing expectations in independence and criticality: "Is it some books, some journals and some websites?"

Using the stage as a metaphor to help students select a range of relevant sources...

... and explore the 'on stage' relationships between sources in their disciplinary reading & writing practices.

Academic reading is a 'conceptual threshold concept' (Wisker & Robinson, 2009) with interdisciplinary significance that crosses subject boundaries.

Background discourses:

- Disciplinary theories and concepts sitting behind the question.
- How question relates (or doesn't) to the 'big' ideas of the module.

Secondary sources:

- Bridge from general subject to specific question.
- Locates the question within big landscape.

Pillars of the Argument:

- Key concepts identified through initial analysis of question.
- Sources focusing on specific aspects of the discussion.

Oscar Winners:

- Big names, without which work appears uninformed.
- Well-established theories and concepts with a wider range of publication dates.

Rising Stars:

- Contemporary authors, theories or concepts.
- Developments / alternatives / arguments.

Newcomers:

- Emerging authors, theories or concepts.
- Not yet well-established or evidenced.
- Most contemporary direction of current debate.

Expresses purpose of academic reading:

The Dressing Room

Reflections: Has enabled students to articulate and reflect on academic practices (e.g." I think I'm

Questions: Works well in HUMSS... what potential for the Sciences? How far could this be used to Thanks: Academic colleagues for the freedom to play with metaphors and support to embed them.

only choosing people who stand on the bit of the stage I like") illuminate reading lists in module guides? Best at end of Y1 or beginning of Y2?

Analysis of each and the meaning they come to in their combined interpretation to form an 'argument'.

Relationships between sources explored through performance metaphor.

- Actors do not stand on exact same spot on stage.
- Each actor takes position on previous performances / scenery.
- Different interactions on the stage represent particular disciplinary epistemological traditions / discourse.

'Breaking of fourth wall' & 'asides to audience' - opportunities to explore critical reading & writing:

> Is the actor 'concurring', 'recommending', 'arguing' etc.? Why

The Reviews (Y2 UG students)

It was just helpful to see where i went wrong in writing too early before I finished my reading ...

Before I used to spend ages wading through a journal (or several!) before realising they would not be useful. Now I read abstract and conclusion before deciding to read more. Such a time saver.

I now read the journals more thoroughly and no longer "cherry pick" in the same way. I also read less journals but in more depth.

The Playwright

Angela Rhead, SFHEA Learning Developer, KIITE, Keele University a.rhead@keele.ac.uk | 01782 734093

The Stage Door

Academic Reading Retreats https://tinyurl.com/ARRKeele

The Papers

Saltmarsh, D. & Saltmarsh, S. (2008) Has anyone read the reading? Teaching in Higher Education, 13 (6): 621-632 Wisker, G. and Robinson, G. (2009). Encouraging postgraduate students of literature and art to cross conceptual thresholds. Innovations in Education and Teaching International, 46, 317-330.

MacMillan, M. (2014) Student connections with academic texts: a phenomenographic study of reading. Teaching in Higher Education, 19(8), 943-954